

There is no question there is a shortage of health care workforce. We have far fewer people in the workforce today than we did when the pandemic started.

~ Jan Emerson-Shea, spokesperson for the California Hospital Association
CalMatters, October 15, 2021

California is in a Growing Healthcare Worker Crisis

- Over 11 million Californians live in an area with a shortage of healthcare professionals. Source
- California will need 500,000 new healthcare workers by 2024. Source
- Nearly a third of state hospitals are reporting critical staffing shortages. For some hospitals in the Central Valley, they have resorted to employing the National Guard for critical healthcare support. Source
- 10% of SEIU-United Healthcare Workers have retired, left the profession, or taken extreme leaves of absence during the pandemic. Source
- California has a shortage of over 40,000 registered nurses. Source
- The number of nurses aged 55-64 considering retirement jumped nearly 14% between 2018 and 2020. Source

California is Failing Adult Learners

- California ranks last in the nation with 57% of adults in need of higher education. (Source: Strada-Gallup Education Consumer Survey 2018-2019) With 6.8 million Californians 25-64 with a high school diploma but not a college degree.
- The need to overcome financial barriers and provide 24/7 flexibility in educational courses are the biggest changes needed to enable California adults to return or enroll in a higher education program.
- Adults with some college experience but no degree cite the single most common reason for stopping their education is the need for flexibility and difficulty of balancing school and work. Source
- If these barriers are addressed, 50% of these adult learners expressed strong interest in returning or enrolling in higher education.*

Without State Action, California's Vulnerable and Sick Will Be More At Risk

- Time to eliminate barriers for financial support and inflexible higher education schedules by creating an Adult Learner Workforce Opportunity Grant specific to adult learners who need 100% flexibility to earn a healthcare degree.
- The grant will open opportunities to adult learners who need financial relief and the flexibility to earn a healthcare degree around their work and family schedules.
- Support Legislation to Create the Adult Learner Workforce Opportunity Grant.

For more information, go to www.CAL-Network.com.

* Heart+Mind Strategies completed n=1065 interviews with a representative sample of Californians with some or no college matching age, gender, and ethnicity of the US Census for California. Additional oversample interviews were conducted with key groups, including: veterans, single mothers/fathers, foster children, rural residents, low-income rural residents, Asians, 1st and 2nd generation immigrants. Respondents participated via an online survey conducted June 15 to July 20, 2021.